CRIME 11-YEAR LOW

By
Felicity Jump

CRIME in Hackney is at its lowest level for 11 years, according to the latest figures.

Met Police statistics for January to December last year, show that crime dropped by three per cent – with 910 fewer offences in the borough than in 2009.

Residential burglary was down by 15 per cent, with 246 fewer offences. This continues a trend that shows burglary has fallen by 57 per cent in Hackney over 10 years.

Gun crime dropped by nearly 16 per cent, with 25 fewer offences, while domestic violence was down 13 per cent, with 238 fewer offences. Racist and religious hate crime fell by nearly 10 per cent, down 36 offences.

There were other reductions in violence against the person, down 3.2 per cent; and commercial robberies, down nearly eight per cent. Serious wounding was down nearly 19 per cent on 2009; drugs offences fell 30 per cent; and sexual offences were down two per cent.

Six murders were committed in Hackney in 2010 – two fewer than the previous year, and seven less than in 2000.

Chief Superintendent Steve Bending, Hackney Borough Commander, said: “We have seen a significant drop in crime in Hackney over the last ten years, which represents our continued focus on tackling crime and anti-social behaviour and bringing criminals to justice. These figures mean fewer victims of crime, which has a real positive impact on the lives of Hackney residents.”

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, added: “We’re encouraged by the figures which clearly demonstrate that violent crime, and crime overall, has fallen. However, we know there is still more to be done and we will continue to work with Hackney Police to reduce all types of crime in the borough.”

Some of the issues to be addressed by the police include a rise in homophobic crime, which increased by nine offences; and rape, which increased by five offences. However, these crimes tend to be under reported and victims are encouraged to continue to come forward. Robbery against the person was also up by 186 offences. However that is still 51 per cent down on 10 years ago.

Nine of the ten Mossbourne sixth formers with offers from Cambridge University

By
Marcel Reinard

TEN sixth formers from Mossbourne Academy have received offers to study at Cambridge University.

The number is comparable to top fee-paying schools like Fettes College, in Edinburgh, which former Prime Minister Tony Blair attended.

Mossbourne revealed most of the successful pupils had benefited from the scrapped Education Maintenance Allowance (EMA), which provides payments of up to £30 a week for students from low-income families if they stay in school.

The 10 students celebrating Cambridge offers are Megan Goldman-Roberts, who plans to study natural sciences; Sharukh Malik, economics; Michael Ha and Shede Javadzadeh, both medicine; Ted Levermore, archaeology and anthropology; Martha Levi Smythe, English; Rosie Gilbert, geography; James Moriarty, music; Ann Lunin, Spanish and German; and Liam Downes, German and Latin.

Headteacher, Sir Michael Wilshaw, said: “This is a remarkable achievement. Most of these students receive EMA and are from modest backgrounds. Mossbourne has always stood for closing the attainment gap between rich and poor and for improving social mobility.

“This is great news for the academy and for Hackney.”

Conditional on what will be the school's first A-level results this summer, other students also received offers from prestigious universities including Bristol, Durham, University College London, Birmingham, Nottingham and Sussex.

Standing up for scrapped EMA

PUPILS from across the borough spoke out against the abolition of the Educational Maintenance Allowance (EMA) at Full Council on 26 January. Maxina Adesina, Student Union President at Hackney Community College, said: “Every student in my college is concerned. The EMAs are the reason some people are able to travel to college, or buy materials and books.” Christobel Yeboah from BSix, added: “Most people at our college get £30 per week. It's money we need. We don't spend it on unnecessary stuff.” The students called on the Council to campaign against changes to the EMA, and to write to the Government to explain how this would affect their studies. Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, reassured students that their views were shared by Hackney's councillors, and that a letter would be sent to the Secretary of State for Education, Michael Gove, expressing the Council's concerns at how students would be affected. She also added that London Councils, which promotes the interests of the capital's 33 local authorities, were preparing a paper on the impact of such a move. The EMA was introduced in 2004 to encourage poorer students to stay in school or college after the age of 16. It was scrapped after a vote in the House of Commons last month. Mr Gove said the grant had been ‘poorly targeted’ and told MPs ‘you cannot spend money you do not have’.

Colin Firth gets comfortable in the Hackney Empire

HACKNEY Empire was the setting for 'The King's Speech' star Colin Firth as he heard he had been nominated in the 83rd Academy Awards.

Filming an interview for US news show '60 Minutes', the former Homerton resident returned to the iconic Mare Street building as it was announced he was short listed for best actor at this year's Oscars. Colin, 50, praised the Empire and told staff his Hollywood contemporaries held the theatre in high regard. Susie McKenna, Empire creative director, said: "He is such a wonderful actor and a great guy, and we are so pleased he remembers us with such fondness. We wish him good luck with the Oscars."

Message from the Mayor

On your side

IN my last message I talked about the severe savings the Council has to make as a result of Government grant cuts. Hackney is used to making efficiency savings, but in the past that money has been reinvested in expanding and improving services. In this budget, instead, that money will have to go to back-filling the central Government grant that has been cut, just to ensure vital services can be kept running. Hackney will not be able to escape the impact of the national spending review, but the Council remains committed to shielding residents from its worst effects.

We know that for many residents the support the Council offers through essential services is vital in helping them through their day-to-day lives or what can be personally very difficult times – and it is those services that must continue.

In the past year, we have provided 640,000 hours of home care helping residents to fulfil their wish to continue living in their own homes, and for those who needed extra help we provided 160 nursing home placements.

Our social workers have helped parents who needed extra support, resulting in fewer children in Hackney needing to be taken into care and more stable and safe families that can stay together. But there are still 265 children who the borough needs to look after directly, and those services cannot be put at risk.

The Council currently provides care packages for 130 disabled children and is supporting more than 1,000 young people through the youth offending team to move on to a more positive future.

Last month, we backed the opening of a new credit union in the borough aimed at residents who are unable to open accounts with the main high street banks, helping to steer them away from unscrupulous money lenders during these tough economic times.

As I've said before, I'm determined that in the forthcoming budget the Council will not be making front-line cuts to the services it provides to residents – there will be no raising of eligibility criteria for home care for the elderly, there'll be no library closures, no closure of children's centres and no reduction in the cleanliness of our streets.

However, the Government have made it clear that they will be cutting local government grants each year for another three years. So in the future we will be presented with hard decisions, and we will be asking you how we go about continuing vital services at a time when Government funding is being reduced by more than a quarter. What I can guarantee is that the Council will continue to listen to residents' priorities and to champion your interests, standing up for what we believe is fair.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: “This is an exciting time for the Archives. We will be running a limited service until the move is complete, and ask that residents bear with us until our improved service opens later in the year.”

Hackney's collections include official administrative records of the borough council and its predecessors dating back to 1700; records of local organisations and individuals; and a local studies library, as well as a multitude of photographs, maps and newspapers. The collections currently occupy up about two kilometres of shelving.

Staff will also be developing new resources to improve services, including better catalogues, and new information leaflets about how to use different aspects of the collections.

The new library and archive are part of the Council's wider vision for the regeneration of Dalston, which includes better transport links from Dalston Junction; the development of more than 500 new homes, including affordable homes; the cultural hub of Gillett Square; and improvements to Ridley Road Market.

A day to reflect

By
Marcel Reinard

RESIDENTS, schools and faith groups came together to commemorate, reflect and heed the lessons of the past on Holocaust Memorial Day (HMD).

The international day of remembrance for victims of the Holocaust and other genocides, was observed in the borough with a ceremony in Hackney Town Hall on 27 January.

This year, the theme was 'Untold Stories' – a reminder of the real lives behind the awful statistics – an estimated six million Jews were systematically murdered by the Nazis during the Second World War. A further five to 11 million people were killed for being non-white, gay, Romani, Communist, disabled, Jehovah's Witnesses, or political or religious opponents of the Nazi regime.

Guests heard from sixth formers from Clapton Girls' Technology College and Skinners' Academy, who recounted emotional trips to the Auschwitz concentration camp in Poland – the largest of the Nazi death camps.

Pupils from Simon Marks Jewish Primary School also performed a choral recital; while Bridge Academy pupils explained what they had learnt from the Anne Frank Trust's touring schools exhibition; and students from The Bridge Academy presented a play about a rescue mission in Nazi Germany just before the outbreak of the Second World War.

Nicola Baboneau, from The Learning Trust, said: "The students presented with sensitivity and sincerity. Members of the Jewish community said they were particularly pleased that subsequent genocides were also referenced."

Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Sally Mulready, led a two-minute silence. She said: "It is important we listen to, know and understand the stories passed on by Holocaust victims. In so doing we will together create a society where justice and equality between people of all cultures and communities prevails."

New credit union opens in Hackney offering affordable and ethical banking

DID YOU KNOW?

Fresh financial face

The official launch of the London Community Credit Union branch in Mare Street on 24 January

By
Gareth Greene

A NEW credit union offering fair financial services has officially opened in Mare Street.

Residents, partners and London Community Credit Union (LCCU) staff attended the launch of the new branch on 24 January.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "Not only will a credit union help those who are unable to open accounts with the main high street banks, it will hopefully steer people away from unscrupulous money lenders."

LCCU Chairman, Ian Moseley, added it would offer responsible financial solutions that are within the reach of all, regardless of past credit history or personal circumstances.

He said: "We offer members sound financial planning and the tools to grow their savings while enjoying the benefits of access to cash and credit.

"Some reports suggest that up to 40 per cent of Hackney residents could be considered 'financially excluded,' and thus subject to exploitation by unscrupulous lenders. We aim to help move such lenders out of the borough by offering accessible and fair financial services."

Staff were on hand to give advice on the many products and services offered by the credit union and to assist potential new members to join up.

Formerly known as Tower Hamlets Community Credit Union, LCCU has been established for 10 years and already has over 10,000 members.

A credit union is a co-operative financial institution owned and controlled by its members that promotes saving, provides credit at reasonable rates, and offers other financial services. Deposits are fully protected by the Financial Services Compensation Scheme (FSCS).

News in brief

Sex establishments policy

A POLICY to control the operation of businesses like strip clubs in the borough has been approved by the Council. Following a 12-week public consultation, the 'sex establishments' policy was amended so that existing businesses could continue to trade under certain conditions. The new rules voted in by Full Council on 26 January include a 'nil policy' which prohibits the opening of any further sex entertainment venues in the borough. This covers places like strip clubs; lap dancing clubs; sex shops and sex cinemas.

During the consultation, which ran from 20 September to 13 December, residents were asked to comment on draft proposals.

Results revealed that 65.8 per cent of respondents disagreed with a nil policy on sex cinemas; 74.7 per cent disagreed with a nil policy on sex shops, and 66.3 per cent disagreed with a nil policy on sex entertainment venues.

Following this feedback, the policy was amended to grant an exception for five existing businesses – all in the Haggerston area – provided they can demonstrate they are long-standing, well run and do not raise significant concerns for the community and statutory authorities when applying to renew their licences.

Jail for Godwin Lawson's killer

A MAN has been found guilty of murdering promising young footballer Godwin Lawson in Hackney last March.

Moise Avorgah, 20, of Tottenham, was sentenced to life imprisonment with a minimum of 19 years by a judge at the Old Bailey on 2 February. Godwin, 17, had moved from Enfield to Oxford to play football for the Oxford United Academy. He was in London to meet his friends, brothers Daniel and Julian Borja. The exact motive is not known, but all three were attacked as they walked through Amhurst Park, N16. Godwin died from a stab wound to the chest. The Borja brothers were taken to hospital suffering life-threatening stab wounds but survived. Following the incident, three other people were charged with murder, two counts of attempted murder, and two counts of GBH. Koffi Osimeh, 20, Daniel Riley, 22, and Matthew Lanahun, 21, were cleared of all charges. Avorgah was found guilty of two counts of GBH and sentenced to 12 years to run concurrently.

Detective Inspector Andy Manning, who led the investigation, said: "I am pleased with the verdicts and pleased that Godwin's family has got justice for him. "This conviction sends out a clear message – the police and the local community will not tolerate such acts of violence." Godwin's mother Yvonne added: "Losing Godwin feels like we have lost our future hopes and dreams. We feel like we are embarking on a long painful journey that will never end. "Whilst I am very satisfied that someone has been brought to justice, It will never bring him back to us. It will however stop him (Avorgah) taking the life of someone else's child."

Safer shopping

POLICE, Council staff, councillors and business people were joined by Meg Hillier, MP for Hackney South and Shoreditch, to launch a project to reduce crime in the Mare Street area.

The initiative will allow police to share details of people convicted for offences like shoplifting, pick-pocketing and anti-social behaviour with security staff from participating Narrowway shops. The project will run alongside the Business Watch shop radio scheme, and will alert stores when a known suspect enters a local shop.

Speaking at the launch of the Information Sharing Agreement, Meg Hillier said: "We are celebrating businesses working together and excellent neighbourhood policing, which are both helping to tackle crime."

The project is led by the Hackney Central Safer Neighbourhoods Team (SNT) and supported by the Council and the Town Centre Partnership Forum.

Chief Inspector Jane Easton, of Hackney Police, added: "I'd like to thank PC Ferhat Murad from the Hackney Central SNT for all his hard work on this. I hope this project will reduce crime, allow businesses to thrive and improve the experience of shoppers."

Residents were offered information and advice on issues such as home

Developers Berkeley Homes and social landlord Genesis Housing Group were on hand to update residents on the regeneration and other positive changes to the area.

Visitors could sample a selection of cuisines, while children had their faces painted and were treated to magic tricks and kept entertained with interactive games that challenged all ages.

Among the range of activities available on 26 January, was a sizzling Zumba dance class run by a teacher from over 50s charity, The Sharp End; massages; healthy eating tips; fresh fruit giveaways; and free woolly hats and gloves for all.

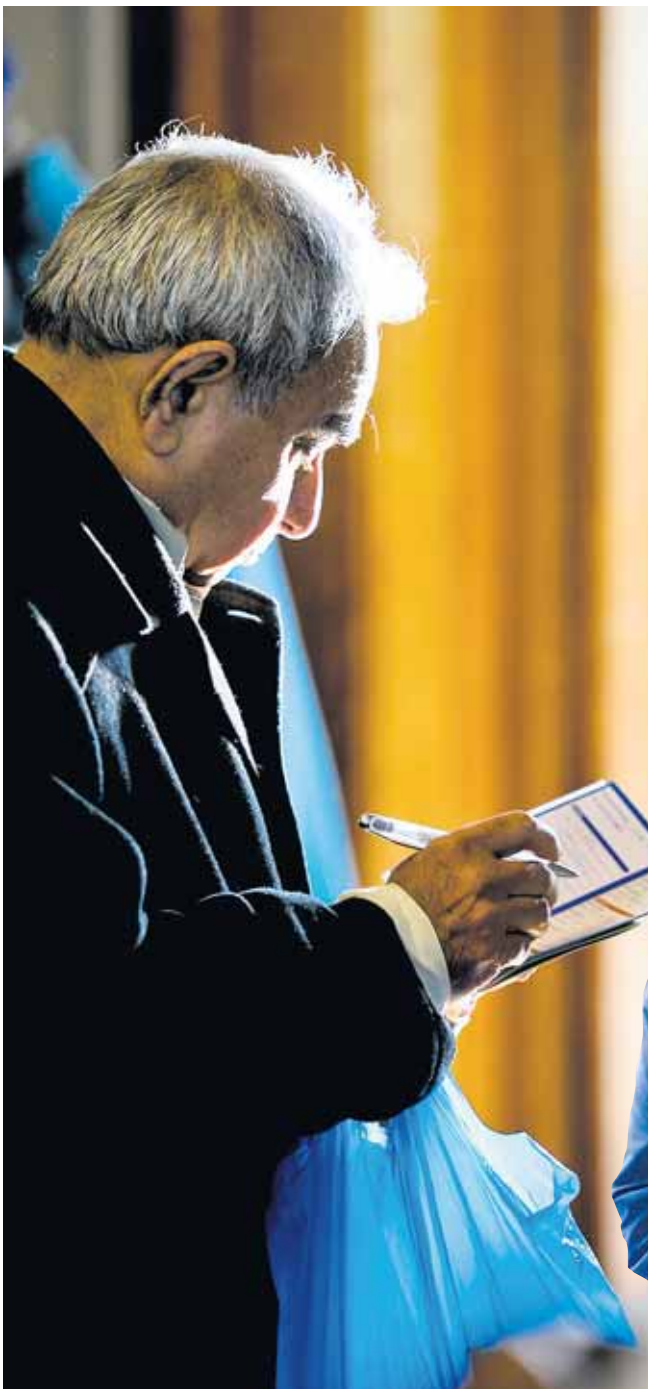

Residents living in properties managed by Hackney Homes – which is responsible for all the Council housing in the borough – could also report repair issues on their estate and get advice about service charge bills during the event.

Older residents, including former model Irene Sinclair, 102, and friends (top), tried Zumba dancing; took advantage of health checks; and collected free fruit and information on staying warm from Hackney Homes staff

Not such a small town girl

Elly Barnes in front of a flag – made by Stoke Newington School pupils – for LGBT History Month in February. A shot from her teenage Goth days (inset)

By Ruth Garland

ELLY Barnes is so articulate and lively, and so dedicated to educating young people about the importance of accepting ourselves as we are, that it was only a matter of time before she made national headlines.

As music teacher and LGBT (Lesbian Gay Bisexual Transgender) co-ordinator at Stoke Newington School, she believes that to achieve acceptance, young people need the facts. She says: "It's ignorance that causes homophobia – once educated, attitudes change. Sometimes it's a deep-rooted hatred which can take a long time to change.

The best way is to show positive role models."

This can involve using shock tactics, like when she invited black lesbian rapper, Mz.Fontaine to a school assembly. Elly recalls: "She announced straightaway 'I am currently a lesbian and I am transitioning'.

"The students were amazed. Mz.Fontaine then spent an afternoon delivering music workshops which were attended by some previously homophobic girls. Together they wrote a 12-minute rap about diversity."

Elly put Hackney's innovative approach to diversity on the national agenda last October when the Guardian ran an article about how lessons on gay history had cut homophobic bullying at the school. "I've been doing this for six years," she says.

"When the article came out I got 300 e-mails from schools and parents asking for advice."

Music has been at the heart of Elly's life since the age of five when she was picked for the first of many school performances. She explains: "Because I'm tall, I played boys, mums, witches – the character roles. I was never the diva."

Singing was her first love – as a mezzo soprano

she studied opera at the Birmingham Conservatoire – but she is also classically trained in piano, guitar and cello. Before becoming a full-time teacher she was a session singer and still sings at weddings and in cabaret.

Her own role models as a teenage Goth in rural Leicestershire helped to define herself as a young woman. She says: "I loved anyone that was a bit different. The 1980s, when I grew up, was a fantastic time for men in makeup. I loved David Bowie – his music, the way he dressed – and Annie Lennox, All About Eve, The Cure."

The power of music and musical heroes can unlock prejudice, as happened six years ago at her first LGBT assembly, when she used Bronski Beat's 'Small Town Boy' to illustrate the pain of rejection and the joy of coming out.

On 17 February, she presents this year's show at Stoke Newington School to mark LGBT History Month, with students performing Elton John's 'Your Song', as well as numbers from Queen, Dusty Springfield, Janis Joplin and Chopin. The whole school is involved, with each subject department taking a fresh look at LGBT issues through their own disciplines.

Elly has just taken on a new challenge – running diversity sessions for teachers all over the country, helping them to challenge prejudice and celebrate diversity in the classroom.

She adds: "Some schools think they don't have to do it, but they do. Schools have a duty to protect young people and create an environment where staff and students feel safe to be themselves."

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I already recycle quite a lot and try to keep my carbon footprint low. But now I would like to find out more about what green events are happening and meet other people who feel the same way. How can I get involved?

A: You sound like the perfect candidate to join the Council's Green Champion scheme.

A champion's role is to promote environmentally friendly ideas to friends, neighbours and colleagues; help out at events; and be part of a focus group for the Council's recycling team.

New year trees

Simon Marks pupils dig in for Tu B'shvat – the Jewish New Year for trees

By
Olaide Oyekanmi

PUPILS teamed up with professional gardeners to plant a host of new trees on the Nelson Mandela estate, N16, as part of Tu B'shvat – the Jewish New Year for trees – on 20 January.

Hackney Homes gardeners worked with Simon Marks Jewish Primary School, in Stoke

Newington, to provide the trees, which included a poplar, rowan and an ornamental pear. They also helped youngsters to plant the trees correctly and offered some tips on how to care for them.

Ward councillors Linda Kelly and Rita Krishna joined in, along with teachers and local residents.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "This festival is a fantastic example of the work we can do in the community to improve our environment and make Hackney a greener place to live.

"It's wonderful to see the children from Simon Marks helping out to make a positive change on the estate."

Christophe Tabi, Hackney Homes Interim Head of Estate Environment, added: "This year, we plan to plant over 800 trees on our estates. "Trees help to brighten the estate, enhance the environment by attracting more birds and wildlife, and improve the quality of life for residents."

Estate recycling record breakers

RESIDENTS on Hackney's estates are recycling at record breaking levels.

Figures show that by the end of last year, recycling reached its highest level ever, with a massive 315 tonnes of material – the weight of 35 buses – collected in December.

With around half of all residents living on estates, the Council has installed 2,500 recycling bins to serve these communities. Mixed plastics, cardboard and Tetra Paks, as well as glass, cans and paper, can be disposed of at estate recycling sites.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "Our residents are recycling more than ever, which is fantastic news. The improvements to facilities on estates are making it much easier for residents to recycle. But we need to do even more."

If everyone living on an estate recycled everything possible – 60 per cent of all household waste – a massive 1,500 tonnes of recycling would be collected in the borough each month.

This would save the Council £100,000 each month, which could be spent on other vital services.

Last November and December, recycling officers visited over 5,000 properties to tell residents about facilities and how they could recycle more.

Tick the box about batteries

By Mary Anna Wright

THE Council has launched a survey to encourage more people to use battery recycling points in Hackney.

The average household uses 21 batteries a year. Less than two per cent of these are recycled however, creating up to 30,000 tonnes of waste every year in the UK.

Most batteries contain heavy metals, which can seep into the ground, causing soil and water pollution, and posing a threat to wildlife. Cadmium, for example, is present in a lot of batteries. It can accumulate in fish, making them inedible and damaging whole ecosystems.

Put used batteries in your Green Box, take them to a library with recycling facilities, or invest in rechargeable ones

Battery recycling facilities can be found in most of the borough's libraries. Batteries can also be put out with residents' Green Box collections. (It's helpful to the recycling crew if they are kept in a separate bag.)

Thirty rechargeable battery packs are up for grabs for those who answer a short questionnaire. Each pack contains four fully charged AA rechargeable batteries, and a charger for AA and AAA batteries.

Nappy days are here

PARENTS and babies visited Hackney City Farm on 28 January to find out more about real nappies. It was the latest in a series of 'Nappuccino' events, that provide information about switching from disposable nappies. The Council offers parents and carers a voucher worth £54 to help get started. The money can be redeemed against nappies or laundry services. Since the scheme started in 2005, over 1,600 parents have joined – more than anywhere else in London. By using washable nappies, people have helped stop 330 tonnes of disposable nappies going to landfill – which would have cost around £42,000 in disposal fees. Nappuccinos are held each month during term time, with events planned for 18 February, 25 March and 20 May, from 10.30am at Hackney City Farm. They are run in partnership with the Hackney Real Nappy Network and not-for-profit enterprise Nappy Ever After. To attend, register with Leonor Barricarte Bulnes on: 020 8356 7930.

Duty of care

Queensbridge caretaker Jim Doyle in the early days and (inset) a recent shot

STAFF and students have celebrated the dedication of caretaker Jim Doyle, who has retired after 39 years at Queensbridge School.

Everyone at the E8 school saluted Jim on 14 January, marking his long service with a 'This Is Your Life'-style ceremony. There are also plans to unveil a commemorative bench in his honour. Jim, 69, who joined the school when it was known as Edith Cavell, was praised for his sense of fun and always going the extra mile for the children. He said: "I was truly touched by all the effort, time and heartfelt messages. Being a caretaker at Queensbridge was a great experience and a massive part of my life. It has been a pleasure being part of the lives of so many children and their families and making so many friendships over the years. I am still looking through all the portraits and poems which bring a tear and a smile." Jim retired after suffering from ill health last year.

Shacklewell's Executive Head Teacher, Michelle

"The City Year team starting in Shacklewell this term will be an invaluable boost to the amount of manpower available in the school, supporting before and after-school clubs and classroom learning, as well as break and lunchtime activities.

"More than that, the team will be inspiring and energetic young role models, who will help us encourage a positive attitude to learning and raising aspirations."

Originally founded in Boston in 1998, City Year now operates in the US, South Africa and London.

Since its inception, over 12,500 young people worldwide have completed more than 20million hours of service, working with 1.2million children.

News in brief

Rachel Yankey (in blue) with Clapton Girls pupils

Game on for London youth

ARSENAL Ladies and England international football star Rachel Yankey visited Clapton Girls' Technology College to crank up anticipation for this year's Balfour Beatty London Youth Games (LYG).

The footballer launched the games on 31 January with a training session at Clapton Girls, one of the many schools across the borough preparing for the five-month event. Now in its 34th year, LYG is Europe's largest annual youth games, and in 2010 over 50,000 participants from 33 London boroughs took part in 60 competitions across 30 sports. Heats begin this month and the games conclude with a series of grand finals over the summer.

Rachel, a former LYG competitor, said: "The London Youth Games is one of the most exciting events any young Londoner could wish to experience.

"I would urge anyone with even a slight interest in sport to give it a go, it is very competitive, but loads of fun too."

Stage magic inspires

LEARNING the science behind the magic of theatre may have put City Academy schoolchildren on the road to a career in stagecraft.

Technical theatre pupils from the E9 academy visited the Guildhall School of Music and Drama in January to learn more about jobs backstage. They took in the costume department (below), scene and prop construction, and a lighting workshop to illuminate the mechanics behind the drama school's stage.

Mahmud Ansari, Year Eight, said: "We discovered how important working backstage is and how important the technical crew are. They are the glue that holds a production together."

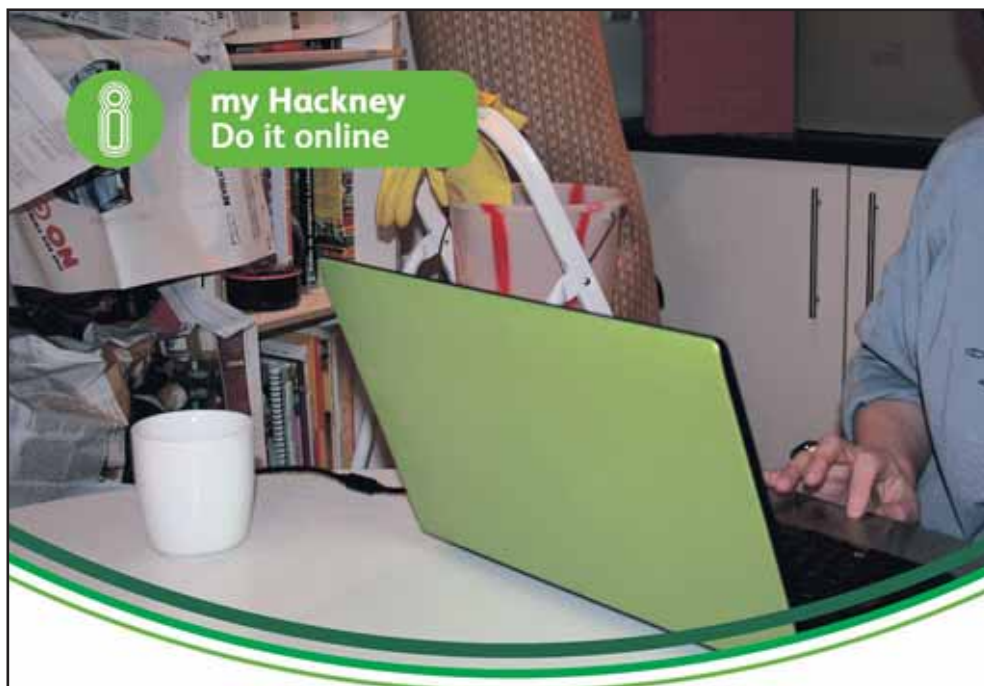

Nitasha Rajoo, Acting Head of Drama at The Academy, said: "I am so proud of the students' maturity in the questions they asked the industry professionals. Many of them are now keen to take on backstage roles."

Ben Sumner, the Guildhall's Director of Technical Theatre, added: "The students were attentive, inquisitive, bright and enthusiastic – what more can you ask for?"

Competition

A BRILLIANT cast, lead by the master of mimicry Alistair McGowan, brings the wit and memorable music of Gilbert and Sullivan to the Barbican in an evening of orphaned pirates, flat-footed policemen and a bevy of blushing maidens.

The Pirates of Penzance (or the Slave of Duty) is lauded as one of the funniest Gilbert and Sullivan musicals, with tuneful melodies and well known songs Poor Wandering One, I Am The Very Model of a Modern Major General, The Sergeant of Police and Policeman's Chorus.

Sullivan's score contains some of his most innovative tunes as Gilbert, in his most topsy-turvy of plots, leads us through the swashbuckling world of young Frederic, the pirate apprentice.

A new pub theatre for Hackney

Opens 24 February above the Britannia Pub, E9

EMERGING playwrights aching to test out material on audiences now have a local venue to submit their productions to: The New Britannia Theatre.

Situated above The Britannia pub in Victoria Park Road, E9, this platform for new writing also hopes to inject renewed interest in musical theatre – unsurprising considering its founders Matthew Henry and Gabriel Vick met while working on the hit adult puppetry musical Avenue Q.

"We knew straight away that the space was something special and are so excited that this dream of a new theatre is a reality. We hope that the surrounding community will share our excitement and come to see what's going on in their own backyard," says Matthew.

Additionally, the duo are looking for actors, writers and backstage hands.

While working towards a season of performances, the founders want to open up the space to visiting companies and theatre groups.

They also plan to offer a writers' group, voice and movement workshops, and a weekly children's theatre group.

Matthew explains: "We know how many young families are in the pub on Sunday afternoons, and thought that parents would appreciate the chance for their children to learn a new skill or simply be entertained for a couple of hours."

The theatre opens on 24 February, 7.30pm, with a 'scratch night' from writers affiliated with the Old Vic New Voices project.

REVIEW

Another Biafra

Rosemary Branch Theatre N1, until 20 Feb

BRITISH and American journalists, a local activist and his wife, militants, a president and an oil company executive raise a range of issues and viewpoints in this swift journey through the labyrinth of international development.

Anthony Abuah's drama is set in Warri, Nigeria, where multi-national corporations sit amidst immense poverty and soil pollution. Performed by the production company he founded, Tales From The Motherland, the play aims to raise awareness of stories about African people that might otherwise not be talked about.

Another Biafra, written to highlight the plight of the Niger-Delta people, was first performed at The Cockpit Theatre, NW8, in July last year, where it was awarded the Ogeyinka Merit Award for Excellence given to artists of African origin.

Among the performers, Marlene Nwoye stood out as the long-suffering wife of jaded activist Apoori, played by writer Abuah (above). Onosky Ujorh raised most of the play's laughs as a manic president in this though-provoking piece.

AN audience of all ages turned out to celebrate the diversity of Hackney and the lives of unsung heroes from the past at Bridge Academy. Shoreditch Youth Forum members developed the 'Hidden Heroes' event on 27 January, with support from the Council's Youth Service and black history heritage organisation, the Every Generation Federation. The aim was to trace family history, research the lives of past Hackney residents, and unearth hidden stories. Attendees enjoyed and participated in mini dramas and debates. There was also a family history exhibition on display, and experts were on hand to provide top tips and advice on how to start a family tree.

Later, dishes and recipes from around the world formed part of a family quiz. Forum member, Jerin Mannan, 14, said: "It was a really special project for us. The research was fun and we learned so much about each other's backgrounds and cultures, as well as our own." ## NEWS IN BRIEF

The ambassadors during their recent training session

Ready for the 2012 Games?

A GROUP of 30 new recruits have been getting to work on a scheme that aims to keep young people up to date with the 2012 Games.

The Council's recently appointed 2012 Olympic & Paralympic Youth Ambassadors took part in a crash course on the role of some key players, including the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) and the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games (LOCOG). The presentations came from young people already involved in the scheme, now Senior Ambassadors. Over the next 12 months, the ambassadors will talk to other young people about 2012-related opportunities in education, sport, culture, training, employment and volunteering. They will also aim to ensure young people are able to influence decision-making around 2012 activities and developments. The new ambassadors were selected in December from 85 applicants, by senior ambassadors supported by the Council's Youth Service and 2012 unit. New ambassador, Mercy Maxxie Brown, said: "I feel great being part of something that is spectacular and widely acknowledged internationally. I hope to achieve better communication skills and hope my journey as a youth ambassador will be fun and interesting."

The club that beats the streets

The first week the club re-opened former European bantamweight champion, Ian Napa, posed for photos with club members

By Club Member Tayla-Destiny Vanriel, 9

ST Matthias Club was established in 1969 as a boys club. It re-opened on 7 January. Now the club is for girls and boys.

St Matthias Club is a really good youth club and isn't hard to find. In the community we are all friendly people and make everyone feel welcome, especially the staff. We have all sorts of games you can play such as snooker, table tennis, draughts, etc. The club will also start a tuck shop so you might want to bring money. There is a soccer academy for boys and girls.

The club is all about respect, which means it does not tolerate any bad language or fighting – play fighting included.

Personally I think it is the best club ever, because everyone treats people with respect and everyone welcomes people, leaving no-one out. My favourite games are snooker and table tennis because there is always someone willing to play with you or help if you do not know what to do.

If you are interested in going to the club, the age group ranges from eight to 11 years. Come and experience it for yourself – the club is open to anyone.

Your first week is free but other weeks are not. They will cost £1. The club will accept all offers of new members. But please make sure that an adult brings you, as you will be given a membership form that you and your parents must sign. The club is hoping to eventually open to members aged up to 15, and offer more activities from cricket and basketball to art.

East End time machine

One of the shots on display in the exhibition of Paul Trevor's work

EAST End photographer Paul Trevor takes a simple approach to his work – keep a camera with you at all times.

An exhibition at Homerton hospital will display just a slice of the 120,000 pictures he took using this method as he recorded East London life between the 1970s and 1990s. 'Childhood: From Paul Trevor's Eastender Archive' will be on display in the hospital's education centre for one day only on 23 February. Documenting social history and offering an in-depth portrait of the social, economic, cultural and multi-ethnic make-up of the area, the show reflects Paul's life-long interest. Currently, he is editing his multitude of negatives to feature in a series of books.

Paul has always believed photography can capture the past – and tell a story visually. Referring to when he first picked up a camera as a child, he said: "Here is a time machine, I said to myself, capable of capturing not just the fleeting moment, but also much larger chunks of human and social time. Why not try to do both?"

Don't miss HPV jab

By
Marcel Reinard

HACKNEY'S young women have been told it's not too late to protect themselves against cervical cancer by having all three doses of a life-saving vaccine.

The appeal follows a Health Protection Agency report that shows the NHS City and Hackney area was 13 percentage points behind the national average for eligible 12 and 13-year-old girls completing the human papilloma virus (HPV) vaccine programme during the 2009/10 academic year.

In England, around 76 per cent of females aged between 12 and 13 completed the HPV course, whereas only 64 per cent received all three injections in the local NHS area.

The vaccination programme is available in schools for Year Eight girls and from GPs.

Combined with cervical screening the jabs are an important step towards preventing cervical cancer.

It is estimated that the jabs could save 400 lives every year.

Dr Jose Figueroa, Deputy Director of Public Health at NHS

We urge all girls aged between 12 and 18 to protect themselves by having the HPV vaccine

City & Hackney, said: "We urge all girls aged between 12 and 18 to protect themselves by having the HPV vaccine.

"For the best protection, girls need all three doses. If you or your daughter is aged between 12 and 18 and has missed the vaccine, or needs to complete all three doses, call your school nurse or GP."

News in brief

Help shape adult social care

If you use adult social care services, or if you care for someone who does, your views and experiences could help shape future services in Hackney.

Hackney Council, NHS City & Hackney, and other partners are reviewing the services that are currently on offer.

They would like input from residents to help understand what works and what could be improved. The aim is to have a range of services that meet local needs.

Adult social care is changing to give people more choice and control over the support they receive and who provides it.

This includes the option of buying services using a personal budget from the Council, giving residents much greater choice. The review will cover services from the Council and local organisations, including advocacy, counselling, information and advice, and healthy living.

The review has been grouped into five areas: mental health, older people, physical disabilities, carers and learning disabilities. The consultation runs until 31 March. Results will be posted online and the Council will continue to work with local people as the plans are put together.

To take part, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/trasc-info-and-advice; for info or to request a paper questionnaire call: 020 8356 3966; or e-mail: trasc@hackney.gov.uk

Service providers sharing ideas at an adult social care conference last year. The Council and its partners want to hear views from service users and carers

Mental health teams move

TEAMS that work with older people with mental health difficulties in Hackney have moved to 30 Felstead Street, E9.

Mental Health Care for Older People (MHCOP)'s new Hackney Wick base boasts more space for consultations with older people and their families, increased room for therapies, better clinical facilities, a diagnostic memory clinic and teams to deal with dementia as well as common mental health problems such as depression, according to East London NHS Foundation Trust.

A range of specialist professionals will also be available, including doctors, nurses, psychologists, social workers, occupational therapists and support workers.

An added benefit is that the accommodation is shared with the local Alzheimer's Society branch which means service users and their families will get a more connected service, according to the Trust, which provides mental health care services to the borough.

If you or someone you know is experiencing mental health difficulties, contact your GP in the first instance to discuss referral to a service which can help. For more info visit: www.eastlondon.nhs.uk

Our first hospital

By Sally England
Local Studies Librarian

AS medieval London developed into a centre of trade and commerce, it wasn't only the city that spread: terrible diseases were rife, one of the worst being leprosy.

Lazar houses (leper hospitals) were established to care for sufferers away from the city and one such site, founded c1280, stood on the southern corner of the junction of Balls Pond Road and Kingsland Road.

Like other such institutions it was known as 'Le Loque' or 'The Lock', which came either from the French word 'loques' meaning rags, and referring to the dressings applied to leprosy sores, or to the patients being locked away from the rest of society.

The inmates were not entirely forgotten however: in the early 1400s John Pope, a barber, wrote in his will 'to the master and governors of the house of lepers at Kingsland without London, an annual rent of 6s 8d issuing out of certain shops in Sherborne Lane, towards the sustenance of the said house at Kingsland forever'.

A surgeon was in charge of the 30 bed hospital along with a chaplain, sister, nurse and helper. A chapel dedicated to St Bartholomew was attached to the north side of the hospital, half in the parish of Islington and half in Hackney, with a patients' pew in the gallery keeping the disfigured inmates out of sight of the public.

By 1549, Kingsland and five other lock hospitals became 'outhouses' of St Bartholomew's Hospital and were used for treating convalescents and patients with incurable diseases who needed constant attention.

Leprosy was by now less common, the last recorded patients being admitted in 1557, so the hospital increasingly treated venereal disease, with the Kingsland hospital reserved for women and the Southwark lock for men. A stark reminder of what had brought patients to Kingsland could be read in the inscription surrounding the sundial on an end wall: Post Voluptatem Misericordia – 'After pleasure, pity'.

Records from the 1600s show that patients at Kingsland received good care: a candle was kept burning in each of the six wards throughout winter nights, and their diet consisted of wheaten bread, beef, soup, beer, cheese or butter, water gruel or milk pottage, with 'good Suffolk cheese' purchased in preference to Cheshire. A room for drying clothes was installed, and copies of Lewis Bayly's immensely popular book, 'The Practice of Piety', were distributed to all discharged patients. By the 1720s the hospital was much in need of refurbishment, especially as the wards were now three feet below the level of the road alongside. Rebuilding was partly funded by John Ward of Hackney, with a coach house and stable also added and the surgeon's house repaired. More repairs and additions are recorded throughout the next 40 years, but keeping the two outhouses running at a cost of £700 per annum was a large expense for St Bartholomew's Hospital, and eventually the Kingsland Lock closed its doors in 1760 after nearly 500 years.

The old hospital was let out as tenements but the tiny chapel, only 27ft by 18ft and 20 feet high, still functioned as a place of worship at the request of local residents with the former chaplain continuing to preach there at the expense of his congregation.

Repairs including new paint and a replacement roof were paid for by St Bartholomew's Hospital in 1823, but in 1846 the chapel was finally demolished.

The Star and Garter pub was built on the site, its north door on the exact spot where the north entrance to the chapel once lay. In 1938, the pub closed, but the Victorian building survives today on the site of Kingsland's lost chapel and leper hospital.

By

A YOUTH cycling exchange born on a Hackney estate has started a partnership between the borough and a small town in Uganda, East Africa.

The project, which is based on the Nightingale estate, was planned by Keir Apperley, Manager and Head Coach at Cycling Club Hackney (CCH), with support and advice from development charity, the Commonwealth Youth Exchange Council (CYEC).

It kicked off with a trip to Uganda last December and the first event organised by CCH and host country organisations – a hill cycling time trial. Partly sponsored by donations from Hackney Homes staff, Keir met local people and made plans to return this December, when keen young cyclists from Hackney hope to travel to Uganda for a three week tour, teaching good cycle maintenance on the way.

Uganda's cycling fans will then be invited to London in summer 2012, when they will receive training on first aid, bike maintenance and road safety.

CCH – which is supported by the Council, Hackney Homes, Team Hackney and The Learning Trust – offers training and a chance to compete for young people in under-13s and under-18s groups.

Keir said: "This exchange would like to deliver first-class training and skills to participants from Uganda with the goal of setting up centres of cycling in new regions around the country.

"As for Hackney's young participants, this project will be an exciting opportunity to learn first-hand about life in Uganda, make a positive contribution, develop connections and expand horizons, whilst improving their life skills."

The exchange will also coincide with the delivery of a container loaded with cycles and related equipment sent out in partnership with Re-cycle, a UK charity committed to providing cheap, sustainable transport for people in several African countries.

News in brief

Happy passengers

SATISFACTION with the London Overground network has increased, according to an independent survey. Passengers said they felt stations were cleaner, safer and more welcoming; services were more frequent and reliable; and customer information had improved. The findings came from three annual surveys conducted since London Overground took over the network from Silverlink in 2007, investing £1.4 billion in improvements. Rail watchdog Passenger Focus carried out the latest study last autumn as part of its National Passenger Survey. It found that 85 per cent of passengers were satisfied with Overground services, up from 82 per cent in 2009. Since TfL created London Overground in 2007, the East London Line route has opened, connecting Dalston Junction with New Cross, Crystal Palace and West Croydon. This includes four new stations in Hackney and a new link from Dalston Junction to Highbury & Islington, which is expected to open later this month. ### Criminals have had their chips

OVER 1,200 Hackney cyclists have benefited from free bike micro-chipping and registration at a series of events organised by the Council and Hackney police. According to TfL figures, cycles are the main form of transport for five per cent of all journeys in the borough – the highest level in London. However, 1,509 pedal cycles were stolen in Hackney last year, with only a small percentage being reunited with their owners. But when a stolen micro-chipped and registered bicycle is recovered by police, they can use the data to identify the owner. Since last September, 18 of these events have taken place in Hackney. ImmoTag chips, which normally cost £15, were fitted to cyclists' bikes for free by police, while Council transport officers were on hand with some tips on safer cycling.

Cllr Sophie Linden, Cabinet Member for Crime, Sustainability and Customer Services, said: "This project has not only highlighted the issue of cycle theft, but has given residents the knowledge and tools they need to improve their cycle security."

PC Maz Lovegrove of Hackney's cycle crime squad, added: "Criminals should think twice about stealing a bike in Hackney – microchips mean police can verify ownership details whilst on routine patrol."

Further events are planned for the coming months. For info call: 020 8356 3170.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

Recipes straight from the ovens at Hoxton Apprentice

www.hoxtonapprentice.com

Stoke Newington resident, Claudia Videira, 21, joined the front of house team at Hoxton Apprentice last October. She was unemployed but had some previous experience of working in the hospitality industry. In addition to wanting to get back into work, Claudia was keen to develop her skills and get a qualification. She discovered Hoxton Apprentice and Training for Life through Working Links in Hackney – and has never looked back. She said: “It has been an amazing experience – during my time here I have gained confidence and skills. Working with customers in the restaurant can be a challenge, but it can also be extremely rewarding. And you always feel supported by the team.” Now studying for an NVQ Level 2, Claudia’s ultimate aim is to work with children and have her own business, and hopes she can transfer some of the skills she has developed during her time at the Apprentice.

Stormont House

RESIDENTS need to be quick if they want to take part in a consultation about proposals to build a new Stormont House School in E5 and reshape Hackney Downs park.

The Council and its partners have secured funding under the national Building Schools for the Future (BSF) programme to rebuild the special school in Downs Park Road and provide an improved educational facility for up to 120 pupils.

The Council is seeking feedback on a proposal to construct the new school to the north of the existing site, on land currently occupied by a tennis court and bowling green.

Hackney's BSF programme will rebuild or refurbish every secondary and special school in the borough by 2015

The land the school currently sits on would be used to create a grassy open space, which will then become common land.

The Council would like to hear from people who use the school, live locally or regularly visit Hackney Downs Park before 13 February. For more information and to complete the survey visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/stormont or e-mail with 'Stormont' as the subject line to: bsf@hackney.gov.uk
